BiblioGov. Paperback. Book Condition: New. This item is printed on demand. Paperback. 26 pages. Dimensions: 9.7in. x 7.4in. x 0.1in.Pursuant to a congressional request, GAO reviewed the Armys fiscal year (FY) 1990: (1) 144-million automatic data processing (ADP) budget request for the Training and Doctrine Command (TRADOC) and Forces Command (FORSCOM); (2) 53-million request to modernize and redesign six standard Army software systems and the potential impact on the planned replacement of the 1-billion Army Standard Information Management System (ASIMS); and (3) 107-million request to purchase microcomputers from indefinite-delivery and indefinite-quantity contracts. GAO found that the: (1) validity of the requirements for the 1. 4 billion in information system initiatives identified in TRADOC and FORSCOM plans was questionable because TRADOC and FORSCOM had not fully complied with the Armys Information Resources Management (IRM) Program; (2) Army may limit its options for replacing ASIMS, because it has not completed a strategy for the future ADP hardware environment, but has begun modernizing six standard software systems to run on the present hardware system; and (3) Armys request for microcomputer purchases from indefinite-delivery and indefinite-quantity contracts may not be fully supported by valid requirements because major commands that can order microcomputers from the contracts have not updated requirements studies or prepared information architectures. This item ships from La Vergne,TN. Paperback.
