Not illustrated. 1883 Excerpt: . youth longs for the future, the man works in the living present, the old man weens over and re. I, cnts of the past. Still, here used in its Bhakesperian meaning of always, ever. 3, Discordant echoes, the hopefulness of youth, the self-confidence of manhood, and the prudence of old 020, often seem to be in opposition to one another, though they arc really all parts of God s teaching! as to the way In which we ought to live. A perfect life must be the outcome of no one of these three qualities, but the result of their harmonious combination. 4. Sec preceding note. He who would truly obey must seek to do not one part of God s will but the whole. 5. Excelsior, a Latin word signifying higher. The whole meaning of this poem is given in the well-known lines-- Higher, higher, will we climb, Up the mount of glory. C. This phrase need not be limited to a village in the Alps of Switzerland, but may be applied to any mountain village. The idea is that although night was coining on, the bearer of the hanner had already-reached a villago in the mountain, and though he was still young, with plenty of time before him, while difficulties sur-rounded his path, yet nothing would make him delay his progress upward. 7. Device, a motto. His brow was sad; his eye beneath Flashed like a falchion 1 from its sheath, And like a...
